WASHINGTON, DC (AP) - The number of people seeking unemployment benefits rose last week, but the gain was smaller than anticipated.

The data comes amid signs that hiring has slowed in recent months. The unemployment rate stood at 7.6 percent in June, up from 7.5 percent in April. The number of people seeking unemployment benefits rose to 354,000, up 13,000 from the previous week. But the number of people applying for benefits fell to 341,000, down 21,000 from the previous week.

The rise in applications was not big enough to offset the decline, resulting in an increase of 13,000. The result is that the number seeking benefits jumped to 354,000, up 13,000 from the previous week. The number of people applying for benefits fell to 341,000, down 21,000 from the previous week.

The overall trend is still upward, with the number of people seeking benefits up 8 percent in the past year. The number of people applying for benefits fell to 341,000, down 21,000 from the previous week.

A year ago, the number of people seeking benefits was 335,000. That level was also 8 percent higher than a year ago.

The number of people seeking benefits fell to 341,000, down 21,000 from the previous week.
